Due Diligence Assessments

Ticketmaster Norway conducts ongoing due diligence assessments related to the company's operations and strives to comply with the group's requirements and procedures as described in the previous section.

The company considers responsibility related to fundamental human rights and decent working conditions to be well integrated into its policies, processes, and management systems.

Due diligence assessments form part of the ongoing operations of Ticketmaster Norway. It is our assessment that the risk related to respect for fundamental human rights and decent working conditions in our value chain is primarily associated with procurement from companies located outside the Nordic region.

Suppliers are risk-assessed and approved by the contract owner prior to entering into agreements. For major contracts, or where there is a risk of violations of fundamental human rights and decent working conditions, suppliers must sign and confirm compliance with the Live Nation Group Code of Conduct.

In addition, the company classifies its suppliers and business partners by generating reports from its financial system that include all entities to which payments have been made during the year.

For 2025, no instances have been identified where Ticketmaster Norway believes it may have caused, contributed to, or been directly linked to a significant risk of adverse impacts on human rights or decent working conditions.

Measures to Mitigate Risk

Ticketmaster Norway conducts ongoing due diligence assessments related to the company's operations, including evaluations of risks associated with our suppliers. We place strong emphasis on these assessments when entering into agreements with new suppliers, as well as in agreements with any partners located outside the Nordic region.

As described above, the due diligence assessments carried out for 2025 did not reveal any information regarding actual adverse impacts or significant risks of adverse impacts.
